Chinamen, in native dress, will be seen conversing fluently in Esperanto with a group of Americans, politics, science, or literature being dispatched with equal fluency. And always the most notable of the notables, sought after by all, but with enthusiasm to go all round, is Dr. Zamenhof himself, the inventor of the language.

The doctor has another name which is dear to all Esperantists, it is "Doktoro Esperanto," which means Doctor Hopeful.

That is my nom de plure, "he said, with a twinkle of his kindig eyes, "If you are in the newspaper business, you will know that writers must have a nom de plume.

"Well, I had worked nearly a quarter of a century making Esperanto perfect. Then I sent out my first little Esperanto book under the name 'Doktoro Esperanto.' I was 'Dr. Hopeful,' and the growth of Esperanto has more than their usual share of the growth of Esperanto has more than justified the name I took. Yes, it will be the universal language, and more than any other agency will establish universal peace, and bring about the brotherhood of man."

And while Dr. Zamenhof was declaring that he attrached most significance of the conclusion that the attached most significance of the providence of the provi
